Event Description

Building Better Caregivers. Help rural caregivers connect to a new online workshop. Millions of rural caregivers provide crucial support to family members or friends living with memory loss and dementia. These same caregivers often feel stressed and isolated. An online workshop may help them. The University of California, San Francisco is conducting a study of a new online caregiver workshop. If caregivers live in a rural area, care for someone with memory loss, are 18 years of age or older, and provide care for at least 10 hours per week, they may qualify. Caregivers who participate in the study of the workshop will be asked to complete four surveys on their caregiving experiences and will receive up to $80 in cash for doing so. What does the online workshop offer? The workshop is accessible to rural caregivers whenever they want it, day or night. It teaches caregivers new skills to reduce their stress, take better care of themselves, manage difficult behaviors of their family member or friend, and plan for the future. Caregivers also get a workbook to keep, support from other caregivers, and information on community resources. In addition, Zoom and video capabilities are not required to participate in the workshop. Our workshop is different from other caregiver programs because it can be accessed anytime (day or night), there are no set meeting times, and caregivers do not need to meet in-person or leave their care partner alone to participate, important during COVID. Also, caregivers can do the workshop using a smartphone, tablet, or computer. In addition, Zoom and video capabilities are not required to participate. How can caregivers and others learn more? Interested caregivers can go to <https://caregiverproject.ucsf.edu> or call the toll-free number 1-833-634-0603 to get more information. Online registration is ongoing and will continue for months to come. Organizations that work in rural communities or have contact with caregivers can use that same contact information.
